LULL OF THE STORM.

THE STRIKING RIOTERS WILL SEEK REVENGE TO-DAY.

One Thousand Men Will Attend the Funeral of the "Martyrs" Two Regiments of Soldiers on Guard The Coroner's Inquest Continued.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Pa., April 3. Quiet reigned throughout the coke regions this morning. No outbreak had occurred, and as far as fatal and violent by moonlight and vehicle the situation was still grave, the presence of the militia had had a reassuring effect on the people.

The uneasiness and fear not yet to prevail in a awful strain on both the strikers and citizens. No sleeping was done in the camp last night; but crowds paraded the streets or gathered in knots at the corners or disappeared in hamlets over the dark hills, leaving a doubt as to their destination and intentions. The foreigners were quiet, but always on the roads and the momentary fear of an outbreak from the thousands which an entire regiment could not quell was only disequieted by the first streak of early dawn.

Two regiments are now upon the ground, fully equipped and prepared for action. The Eighteenth regiment, with over 300 men, reached here shortly after midnight and the Fifth regiment, with nearly as many more men, arrived upon the scene a little later. Adjutant General McClelland and Brigadier General Wilsey are in command and will remain as long as there is any danger of another raid.

Notwithstanding the prevailing quiet, officers say the trouble is not ended. It is the calm before the storm. The presence of the soldiers has, to an extent, driven away the heavy feeling. Still there is too much uncertainty for comfort. Another deadly conflict will not surprise anyone here. The strikers are in a sullen mood. The evidence before the coroner's jury, tending as it does to show that the fatal firing was hasty, has enraged—them and—their sympathizers may take fire at any time. Not less than 8000 miners are idling around town all day, and the main street in front of the armory, where two companies are stationed, was choked up from morning until night. A collision between two strikers and an insolent soldier occurred near the Baltimore and Ohio depot this morning. The guardsman was worsted in the fight and was taken off by friends. The affair tended to unsettle the general feeling and was accepted as an alarming indication. At a late hour to-night the strikers were holding a big meeting and a feeling of uneasiness prevails among the soldiers.

The leaders of the strikers are fighting for position and power. The men are fighting to maintain their positions and for what they claim is principle. The leaders of the district are all busy at the inquest to-day. They and their attorney, James S. Benson, are watching the proceedings with increasing vigilance. They believe they see in the tactics prosecuting the deputies and managers a plot at coup, and will pursue this policy to the end.

OTHER ATTACKS PLANNED.

This work, however, will only claim a portion of their attention. There is other work to be done. While the troops in this neighborhood will command peace other plants are unprotected. With the strikers' knowledge of the byways and short cuts of the country they can reach a point and complete their work even before the cumbersome militia could move. Then it is argued that there is no use for two regiments at this point. General Wiley has this matter under consideration and it is possible that the Eighteenth regiment may be moved over to or beyond the Youghiogheny river. He is in direct communication with the authorities and will be kept fully advised of every move. A special train will remain at his command which will enable him to move a battalion or a company at short notice.

THE FUNERAL TODAY.

The funerals of the victims will take place on Saturday. Peter Wise, master-workman of the Knights of Labor, says the entire coke country will turn out and that about all time the people must take care. He says the burial of the dead will furnish renewed incentive for the activity of the living.

The dead foreigners will be buried with much pomp and ceremony. They are called martyrs. One thousand men will follow the bodies to their graves. Secretary Parker has served notice to every worker in the region to attend the obsequies at Scottdale to-morrow. The bodies, followed by workers from Mt. Pleasant branch railroad, will go to Scottdale to-morrow morning. They have a special train. They have ordered eighteen cars for this purpose. At Scottdale they will be joined by workers from every plant in the region. The funeral will call together a greater number of men than ever gathered together in this region. The procession will proceed to the cemetery, where all the leaders will make orations, the character of which can be easily imagined.

The dirge of the bands at the funeral will be the knell of more people than the martyrs, was the remark of one leader. "I'm afraid there will be hell to-morrow," said master Wise. "You don't know how terribly the men feel this thing; they are now beyond control. We repudiate any responsibility for the future action of the strikers."

Inspector McCabe has postponed the hearing of Hamm, who is under arrest here at the instance of strikers on the charge of murder. He is waiting on the opinion of Judge Doty, of Greensburg, as to how to proceed. Pending this no further arrests of deputies will be made. If a man goes down the street in a uniform on all sorts of epithets are showered out to him and he is challenged to a fight almost every street corner. The feeling against the militia is very strong. The men imagine they are to blame for yesterday's shooting and they are only waiting an opportunity to shoot them down.

MODERATE THE MILITIA.

General Wiley today detailed Private Kellar, of the Eighteenth regiment, who speaks seven languages, to circulate among the Hungarian and other strikers. To night Private Kellar returned to headquarters and reported to General Wiley as follows: "There is going to be trouble between this and Monday. The strikers are all indignant over the soldiers have been sent here, but they don't seem to fear them. I was in two places this afternoon, where they threatened to attack me until I addressed them in their language. In one house I saw five guns and a number of revolvers. In the other I saw four guns and several revolvers. Five out of every ten of these men have served in the armies of the old country and know what soldiers are. They said they will not fire on soldiers who have been brought here to simply workingmen like themselves and who interfere with their movements. In one of their papers of today that I picked up was an article saying they need not be afraid of the militia men, who were novices and did not know any more about warfare than the strikers themselves. They also [illegible] the Italians [illegible] I heard them in the night [illegible] so far as I know they have discovered there is going to be trouble and they will [illegible] day. All of the Hungarians are in a dangerous mood over the killing of their fellow workmen at Moorewood, a fact that they claim was done in cold blood."

Every precaution is being taken by the militia to prevent any further trouble.

Private Kellar's warning has created a great deal of excitement and sentiment is now placed at every point where trouble is expected.

[illegible]

Late developments tonight indicate a sudden and unexpected movement of the strikers towards Moorewood. The guards at that place have been warned and it is hardly conceived possible the strikers will consider an other raid in view of the fact that the troops are there. To-night Colonel Hopkins hurriedly issued orders to Mr. Pleasant, gathered up three of his companies and hastily left the place. He refused to give his destination, which is either Moorewood or Scottdale, where the funerals of the rioters are to take place. The region is all in a state of excitement over the report of the Moorewood raid.

H. C. Frick was interviewed in Pittsburg tonight and had little to say, except that no more of his plants had been started under supervision of the guards and that he was awaiting developments.

Officials of the McClure Coke company lay the entire blame on Vice President Penna and Master Workman Wise, whom they say worked the men up by illadvised speeches.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

The inquest on the bodies of the men killed at Moorewood, which was postponed last night, was resumed this morning. Neither the sheriff nor the coke companies were represented, while the labor leaders were present in full force.

Albert Halley swore the only shooting he heard came from the guards on the Moorewood property. He was 125 yards from where the shooting occurred.

George Taylor, a watchman, testified to hearing two or three pistol shots before the regular firing of the guard. This witness was the first to reach the spot after the shooting and tells a graphic story of the finding of the bodies of the dead on the bridge or in ditches, while the wounded hobbled away.

Sharp cross questions brought out the fact that the witness was a deputy and carried a revolver also, though he did not know whether all the guards carried revolvers or not. The doubt created as to whether the pistol shots were fired first by the guards or strikers was received with a cheer by the crowd.

Most of the testimony taken this morning was favorable to the strikers, with the exception of Dr. Potter, who testified the company's gates had been broken down. So far none of the deputies or any of the Frick company employes have been on the stand. At noon the inquest adjourned. At the afternoon session of the coroner's inquest two witnesses were heard. Their testimony was about the same as in the morning. The inquest was then adjourned until next Monday at Greensburg.

A prominent leader of the Slav element stated this morning that a majority of the crowd out yesterday morning was there under protest, that the American, English and Irish leaders went to Standard and forced the Slavs to join them under threats of punishment.

General Manager Lynch and Superintendent Ramsay appeared before Squire McCaleb this afternoon and acknowledged service of warrants issued by the strikers' leaders, charging them with being accessories before the fact to the felonious shooting of the strikers. They entered bail in the amount of $400 each for a hearing next week.

Fears are expressed on all sides for the safety of Captain Tate, of this place, whose men it is claimed shot the strikers. The threats are being made on all sides against him and he is going around with a bodyguard. The captain himself has no fear, but his fellow-officers are very anxious that he shall protect himself.

Ex-Secretary Robert Walchorn and Vice President Penna, of the United Mine Workers, returned here to-day. They held a conference in Pittsburg last night and decided to continue the strike.

"The killing of these men," said Penna, "this strengthened our position tenfold. We are determined not to lay down. If the operators are to be aided to protect property, and under that pretext shot down men on the highways, it is time the men were armed to protect their own lives."

At a big meeting held here this afternoon, strong resolutions were adopted denouncing the killing of the men at Moorewood.

The labor organizations of Pittsburg may start a move to take part in the investigation of the coke riots. Secretary Dillon of the flint glass workers said to-day: "The shooting down of these men at Moorewood was an outrage. Organized labor should take the matter up. The United Mine Workers form a big branch of the Federation and the chances are we will take the matter up."

KANSAS CITY.

A Colossal Cattle Deal for Speculative Purposes.

KANSAS CITY, April 3.—One of the most colossal cattle deals ever consummated has just been completed by wealthy stockmen of the west and Chicago packers. W. P. Herring, a well-known cattleman, returned today from Texas, where he has been since January 1. Since that time he has purchased 40,000 head of cattle at a cost of $1,000,000 for himself, P. D. Armour and E. M. Hewins, president of the Cherokee Strip Live Stock association. Mr. Herring reports that an equal number of cattle have been purchased for Nelson F. Morris, of Chicago, by Colonel Suggs, the well-known stockman. The entire outlay has been $2,000,000. The cost of transportation will be another half million dollars. Mr. Herring says that the deal is in the nature of a speculation and has been made because of the scarcity of corn and the high price of cattle, the packers fearing that they might be squeezed during the season.

Charles Myers, the piccolo player who murdered James Weir with a coupling pin and robbed the corpse January 1, 1889, was to-day after three trials, at one of which he was convicted, acquitted on the ground of insanity. Myers' attorney, Frank Lowe, who has fought hard for his client's life, was stricken with apoplexy when the verdict was read. Fears for his life were at first entertained. He was removed to his home in a carriage. Myers betrayed no feeling at all.

Justice Gaunhord was again arrested this afternoon for assaulting H. Chadeayne, a lawyer, in his court room with a chair. Gaunhorn is now on bond, awaiting trial on charges of criminal assault, embezzlement and other offenses.

Robert M. Ray, formerly confidential agent of the Consolidated Tank Line company, was arrested today on a charge of obtaining various sums of money from a half hundred people by false pretences.

THINKING IT OVER.

THE PROSPECTS INCREASE OF A PEACEABLE SETTLEMENT

Blaine Receives Ruffini's Letter Secretary Proctor Tells How We Could Destroy the Italian Fleet Latest News of the International Complication.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—There have been no developments of importance since this morning in the Italian negotiations. The official information upon the subject of the New Orleans lynching was augmented this morning by the receipt by Secretary Blaine of the Italian government's note Wednesday evening. It seems that the communication addressed and sent to Marquis Imperiali as being in charge of the legation here was cabled at once to Rome. Marquis di Rudinì replied last night by cable addressing his note to Marquis Imperiali with instructions to hand it to Mr. Blaine. This was done at 10 o'clock this morning and the document, which was in Italian, was sent at once over to the state department to be translated. The secretary spent the morning at his house and would then not until it had been translated and a copy of it had been sent, together with the original, back to him. Then, armed with all of the documents in the case, he walked over to the White House where the cabinet had been in session for nearly an hour. As he went upon the portico he was met by half a dozen newspaper men who unanimously wanted to know when the letter was to appear. Simply replying that it should be made public to all at once he passed up stairs to the cabinet room.

The substance of the dispatch has already been succinctly stated in the newspaper dispatches from Rome. It was laid before the cabinet by Secretary Blaine and discussed for a time. Later the secretary said he would not be able to give out anything for to-day, so the exact text of the marquis' note remains a secret, and it is remarked as probable that it will not be made public until the secretary has prepared his reply.

Inquiry to-night at Baron Fava's residence as to whether the baron would leave for New York by a later train in order to sail for Italy to-morrow was answered by the statement that he was ill, the servant at the door would take no cards to the baron and could not or would not say how ill the baron was, or answer any questions about his preparations for departure for New York to-night. It can be stated, however, positively that he will not leave for Europe to-morrow.

Charles H. Cramp, the head of the great Philadelphia ship building firm here says New York is in no danger from the Italian ironclads. "They will never come over here," he said confidently. "In the first place they cannot carry coal enough to make such a voyage safely and they could find no place here to recoal. Then their great draught would make it impossible for them to do much damage on this side. They are not familiar with our coast and would be in constant danger of grounding the minute they came at all near the coast." They carry very heavy guns, but except for firing on a city those guns are not effective much over a mile, and the new cruiser recently constructed could be very effective by circling about the monitors and peppering them with long range rifled cannon and drawing them into shallow water. If a shot from one of the ironclads struck one of our cruisers it would, of course, do considerable damage, but except by chance it is doubtful if at any such a distance any gunner in the Italian navy could hit such a small object as a vessel going at the rate of from fifteen to twenty knots an hour. The shallow water and the great draught of the ironclads make it practically impossible for bombard New York. The Vesuvius is the only dynamite cruiser in the world, and if she could drop one of her deadly shells aboard an Italian ironclad all danger from the latter would be over."

PROCTOR INTERVIEWED.

The United States is Better Prepared for War than is Thought.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 3.—Secretary of War Proctor was interviewed here yesterday before his departure for San Diego. The secretary said he did not think the present war flurry would result in anything serious with Italy. He did think, though, that the effect of it would be to hasten congress to the necessity of better coast defences and a larger navy. Guns of no less than eight inch calibre are required and from that up to twelve.

In speaking of an armament, Secretary Proctor said: "I consider the eighteen-inch guns carried by the large Italian war ships as somewhat of an experiment. They necessarily rack the ship, but without reference to their use on board ship, they are short lived. After the guns reach a certain size the increase of internal surface is very great and the immense explosive power is more likely to injure or break them. I think the most serviceable of the large guns are the eight, ten and twelve-inch.

"In addition to the new gun factory, the last congress made an appropriation of $4,000,000 for the purchase of large guns manufactured by private concerns. That will furnish us with one hundred large pieces.

"New York is not without a considerable degree of protection, as we have quite an efficient torpedo service. With the advent of the heavily armored ships of late years great improvements have been make in mortar service. It is surprising with what accuracy mortars can be fired to great heights and shots dropped straight down upon the object aimed at. The latest method of handling them is to place sixteen mortars in square and after gauging carefully the location of a target to fire together all the sixteen mortars at the same instant and it is remarkable how many of the shots will drop down on the spot no larger than the deck of a ship, which cannot be armored like the side on account of the great weight. One of these mortar shot will drop through any ship and almost sink it."

GENERAL FIDER'S OPINION.

General Fider, quartermaster general of the United States, who is with Secretary Proctor, in talking about the present situation of relations between this country and Italy said: "They talk about our government being unable to protect Italian citizens when for years the American citizens and citizens of other countries have frequently been taken prisoners by the banditti of Italy and held for ransom, and frequently maltreated, and yet our government has never taken any serious action on the matter. The only fault with our government is that we have been too good natured with them."

O'MALLY SURRENDERS.

NEW ORLEANS, April 3.—Dominick C. O'Mally, the notorious detective who was charged with having attempted to pack the jury in the Henneessy case and who mysteriously disappeared when the record was at the Clay statue and at the parish prison on the memorable fourteenth of March were howling for his blood, created a sensation this morning by surrendering himself. He drove to the criminal court with his attorney, Barry, ex-clerk of the criminal court, and gave himself up to Chief Deputy Sheriff Arnault.

There are three indictments against him, one as accessory to the crime of bribing one of the talesmen in the Hennessy case, one for perjury in a suit in the civil court several years ago, and one for attempting to procure the compression of the crime of perjury in 1882 in a suit of the state against himself in the criminal court here.

The bail was fixed at $2,000 and Mr. Barry signed for the whole amount. O'Malley looks well though rather pale. He refused to talk but says he will make a statement. He would not tell whether or not he had left the city. Mr. Barry says he has been here all the time.

The feeling against Detective O'Malley is intense, and threats against him have been made by many since his arrival in town. The news that he had surrendered to the officers of the law spread rapidly, and a call for a meeting was issued. The meeting was held in a saloon on Common street, and at it the question of hanging O'Malley was taken up, and some favored stringing him up to the nearest lamp post. Sober judgment prevailed, however, and after a spirited discussion it was decided to allow the law to take its course and if the outcome of the trial was not what the people required then summary vengeance would be meted out.

Crimes Charged to Italians.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., April 3.—There is considerable commotion among the railroad lines in this state and there are indications that the Italians are avenging their countrymen by the destruction of property. Two attempts to wreck the fast express on the Baltimore and Ohio were detected in time to prevent loss of life. A few minutes before the New York express passed a narrow cut near Grafton a track walker discovered several heavy pieces of iron wedged tightly between the rail. An hour later the Chicago express barely escaped a disastrous wreck near the same point by a similar obstruction. A large depot and store building on the Baltimore and Ohio at Constitution was blown up with dynamite, which completely wrecked the building and caused a heavy loss. All the contents were destroyed. All the crimes are charged to the Italians in the neighborhood where they happened.

A Model Building Law.

NEW YORK, April 3.—A combined committee consisting of representatives of the American Institute of Architects, the National Association of Building Inspectors, the National Board of Underwriters and the National Association of Fire Engineers have been in session for two days past. The object of the meeting was the framing of a model building law. Among those present were A. McAllister of Cleveland, Henry Reeves of Philadelphia, O. P. Shelton of Brooklyn, Building Inspector John S. Daniel and Fire Chief Weber of Boston, W. W. Carlin of Buffalo, Fire Chief Bonner of New York, A. S. Stone of Providence, Fire Chief Savage of Chicago, A. C. Hendrick of New Haven, James Battle of Detroit and Henry A. Hills of Cincinnati.

The sub-committee appointed to consider the question at large decided it impracticable at present to draw up a detailed building law which could be applied to all cities without local modifications. Suggestions and points submitted by the sub-committee to form the basis of all codes of building regulations were adopted by the combined committee. A standing sub-committee was also formed to receive suggestions and improvements from time to time for the codes so that the combined committee should be made a permanent one with annual meetings.

Among the recommendations adopted by the committee were: First, that the legislatures of the various states should enact a state building law governing the construction of buildings; second, that in all incorporated cities there should be a separate department for the inspection of buildings; third, that a model special local codes the general law of application of rules should contain rules that all buildings over seventy feet high must be built of incombustible material. Further recommendations are made for the safety of human life in building.

At the conclusion of the convention today the delegates visited the new fire boat New Yorker to inspect the many new features which the vessel possesses.

Interstate Commerce Commission.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The International American monetary commission, which organized here last January closed its sessions today by the adoption of the following preamble and resolutions:

WHEREAS, First—In the opinion of the commission the establishment of a fixed ratio between gold and silver, the adoption of coins of both metals and of a common monetary unit would be of great benefit to the commerce of the world.

Second—That this end could be greatly promoted by means of an international agreement among all the commercial nations of the world.

Third—That it does not seem probable that such an agreement could be arrived at under present circumstances in view of the ill-success of efforts recently made for that purpose; therefore,

Resolved, That this commission bring its labors to a close, expressing the wish that before long another commission may meet which shall reach an agreement to bring about the adoption of a uniform monetary system among the nations of America, advantageous to each and all.

Traffic Association Reorganized.

DENVER, April 3.—The Colorado-Utah Traffic association was reorganized here today. The association is composed of the Denver and Rio Grande, Colorado Midland, Rio Grande Western and Union Pacific companies. Its object is to regulate the handling of traffic to Colorado and Utah points and its organization and operation will be similar to the trans-Missouri association. Mr. P. J. Flynn was appointed commissioner, with headquarters in this city.

Corn Crop Prospects.

CHICAGO, April 3.—A dispatch from Omaha says the state's crop prospects are reported by the board of agriculture to be superior to those of any year in the history of the state. In many localities in the state and also in the Dakotas, farmers are busy seeding. The quantity of moisture received in snowfall during the winter is believed to insure a very good crop even in the portions of Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota most subject to drouth.

Good Reason for a Veto.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 3.—Governor Boyd this morning returned the Newberry maximum rate bill to the legislature without his signature, on the ground that it was unconstitutional. The bill passed the house over the veto, but it is believed that the veto will be sustained in the senate.

EFFECT ON TRADE.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT.

The Results are More Important Than Last Week's Withdrawal Bad Weather and Blockades Lessen Sales Grain Speculation Keeps Up Prices.

NEW YORK, April 3.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: The actual condition of business does not improve, however hope of the anticipation warranted. Unfavorable weather has prevailed over a wide range, affecting retail trade and making country roads still more difficult. Labor troubles are becoming an important factor, strikes having begun at many localities in the building trades, and the great strike having resulted in riots and the calling out of troops.

The volume of all kinds of money in circulation is $21,011,119 greater than a month ago and $12,[illegible] greater than a year ago. Practically the entire increase in March has been in silver certificates and new silver notes, and the amount of gold certificates outstanding has fallen [illegible] by over $[illegible] million. Money is temporarily close at some points on account of April settlements, but nearly all interior markets are quiet and comparatively easier.

The failures for the first quarter of 1891 have been 3,545 in number, against 3,223 last year, and the liabilities $42,[illegible],531 against $37,852,[illegible], in the United States, but most of the increase, both in number and liabilities, appears in the southern states. The eastern and middle states report fewer failures and smaller liabilities than last year, the western states report nearly as much increase. In Canada the number of failures has been 575 against 635 last year but the liabilities $6,046,231 against $5,529,349 last year.

Trade at Boston has been quiet, boots and shoes are slow, the leather trade is moderate and hides are weak. Cotton goods are quiet in first hands, but fairly active for jobbers. The movement of men's woolens is unsatisfactory and trade in wool is moderate, with Australian still in especial demand. Philadelphia wool quiet. Pittsburg notes no important change and Cleveland only fair trade, with Cincinnati, St. Louis, Louisville and Kansas City in the same condition. At Peoria local trade is below last year's and collections very slow, but makers and jobbers of implements note excellent prospects, sales exceeding last year's with fair collections. Chicago observes an increase over last year in receipts of grain and cheese and 50 per cent. in wool, no change in cured meats and hides and decrease in flour, lard, butter and 50 per cent. in dressed beef. Merchandise moves more slowly than a few weeks ago on account of bad roads. Memphis finds trade not yet near the normal, but at Atlanta it is improving, and at New Orleans, where energy is active at lower prices, rice sugars and cotton quiet. Bad weather affects trade at Montgomery; at Jacksonville there are fears of disastrous spring and summer freshets, iron does not mend at all, for in confidence that the strikes will soon end, consumers are waiting. The lowest prices on record are made by some works for bar iron; structural moves slowly, while wrought pipe is terribly demoralized. Pig iron is better than last year, and buyers generally hold off as to raise, risking to help the combination. Coal is $1-[illegible] cheaper than last year but with some cutting. A better tone is seen in copper and speculation has advanced tin and lead a shade. The woolen manufacture is doing fairly, but reports from the west and the growers look for high prices on the new clip of wool, which the present quality of our goods does not warrant. The boot and shoe trade is dull and eastern shipments fall below last year's each week at Lowest. The hide speculation have put new Fars at 90 cents—the cities dividends to hold 2000 tons, the world's consumption being called 1800 monthly.

Speculation in breadstuffs does not abate, and with sales of 33,000,000 bushels here wheat is 1½ cent higher than a week ago. Corn is a shade lower and oats unchanged, but pork 20 cents per barrel higher and lard a quarter of a cent per pound. Cotton has not changed and trading is light, coffee is an eighth stronger and oil three-eighths with small sales. The new tariff has taken effect as to raw sugar and the price is now 3.12 against 3.19 a week ago, while granulated is 4 lling at 4¼ against 4⅜ last week. The average of all prices is a shade lower than a week ago.

Failures during the last seven days number for the United States 211, Canada 32, total 243, as compared with a total of 256 last week, and 218 the week previous to the last. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 206, representing 169 failures in the United States and 37 in Canada.

Grain and Provisions.

CHICAGO, April 3.—With the news of the day very much more favorable than otherwise for a rise in the price of wheat it has only barely maintained its former values measured by yesterday's and today's closing. It averaged higher during the greater part of the session, then the closing quotations, which were close to the bottom of the day's range.

The weather here and the strength of the foreign markets favored the holders of wheat and caused the market to open very strong, with 10⅝ very generally bid for May at the start and also large quantities for sale at that price. Things with a profit in their holdings and the more courageous shorts were the sellers. Some items in the news, notably a cablegram from Berlin which reported Russian crop prospects better than had been generally supposed here and shipments of wheat from that country increasing, created a temporary weakness which caused a decline in the price to 10⅜, but on reports of a continuation of the export demand and further inquiry for cash wheat here and flour at advanced prices at Minneapolis, the market stiffened again and by 12 o'clock was back again to 10⅝.

The firm tone of the closing cablegrams held the market until near the close, and the reports of considerable cash business at New York, Duluth and Chicago were likewise contributory to maintaining the prices, but the bulls had apparently bought all they required and there being still another shot in the bear locker, the latter fired it off near the close and depressed May to 1.05 and July to 1.03⅝.

Closing prices: Wheat—April 1.01, May 1.03, July 1.03⅝.

Corn—April 63⅛, May 63⅝, July 63⅝.

Oats—May 54⅛, July 51⅝.

Pork—May 12.95, July 13.00⅝.

Lard—May 6.82½, July 7.02½.

Ribs—May 6.02½, July 6.37½.

Mining Stock Market.

DENVER, April 3.—There was no apparent decrease in the interest in the mining stock market today, in fact business was heavier than on the previous day and all along the line there was a remarkable firmness in prices. Rengkok, Cora, Belle, Big Six, Diamond B and Ironclad were the favorites. The two first named advanced sharply. Buyers tried hard to induce holders of Rengkok to let go and although a half cent gain was noted in the price of the stock, offerings were very light. It is reported that there is a big thing pending on the stock which if consummated will send prices upward at a rapid rate. Bitcheldor and a score of others wanted Big Six, and they wanted it badly but if there were any sellers they kept out of sight as only a few small lots came out. There was a little more firmness to Diamond B, but sales were not as numerous as on the two preceding days. Rainy Day, Mc Lelland, Farmers and Keeler traded heavily in Ironclad and large blocks of the stock were bought and sold for cash and future delivery. A good deal was traded for Potosi but the gap between buyers and sellers was too wide and no sales were recorded. Total sales 37,000.

NEW YORK CITY.

No News Received From Senator Miller's Shipwreck.

NEW YORK, April 3.—No further word from the wreck of the Agouin at Romeo's reef, in the Caribbean sea, was received at the office of the Nicaragua Canal company in this city today. S. C. Miller, private secretary to Warner Miller, the president of the company, who, with his party at last accounts was still on the Agouin, said to a reporter today: "We do not expect another dispatch until to-morrow, as judging by the time the first one took it is going here. It will require two days for one of the rescuing steamers to run from Greytown to Roncador and back. The means of telegraphic communication between here and Greytown are very indirect. We have built a telegraph from Greytown seventy miles to Castillo, where it connects with the government lines. From Castillo dispatches must go to Salmos Cruce on the Pacific coast by way of Managua and Corinto. They then cross to Coatzacoalcos Coal company, on the gulf of Mexico, thence by the Western Union cable to Galveston and to New York by way of New Orleans.

BALMACEDA'S RESIGNATION DISCREDITED.

Flint & Co. do not credit the report that Balmaceda has resigned. They state that it was probably manufactured by the same interests that circulated the information that Balmaceda had been assassinated. Balmaceda has the power of calling an extra session of congress, and the election as reported yesterday, having resulted in the return of a large majority of the Liberal party, an extra session of congress will naturally result in the general endorsement and support of the executive branch of the government. The election of the president will take place April 15, and the president-elect will assume the reins of government on the 18th of November next, the independence day of Chili. Balmaceda by the constitution not being eligible for reelection.

The trial of Miss Henrietta Woods' suit against Erastus Wiman for $50,000, for damages for libel, was begun in the circuit court in Brooklyn to-day. It arose out of Mr. Wiman's efforts to have imprisonment for debt abolished by law. In support of this bill pamphlets were printed containing statements from judgment debtors who complained of the severity of the existing statute and also setting forth their individual status. Among the other statements was one by Tennant Monett, who was in jail for failing to pay a judgment obtained against him by Miss Woods in a breach of promise suit. In his statement Monett said a number of things that reflected much upon Miss Woods' character, hence the suit.

Leverett Bernard, Henry L. Lee and Henry C. Robinson, three more directors of the New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, gave bail to-day in the sum of $5000. Nathaniel C. Wheeler is the only one of the twelve indicted directors of the road who has not given bail.

Frederick L. Willetts of Flatbush, L. I., who was arrested there yesterday was arraigned in court to-day and held for examination. Willetts and Fred S. Allen, who was arrested in Chicago yesterday, were receivers of the Central Cross Town railroad and are charged with embezzling $[illegible] of the company's funds in December last.

Kate Roache, one of the characters of the Fourth ward, was found in her miserable hovel to-day slowly dying of starvation. She was removed to the hospital, where the doctors say she cannot recover. A search was made of her apartments and amid the rags and squalor the officers found over $400 in gold and bills and bank books calling for nearly $4000 more.

The jury in the case of Alphonz J. Stedman, who has been on trial for some time for the murder of Clinton G. Reynolds, to-night returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree. Sentence was deferred.

Alonzo L. Kane obtained judgment in the supreme court against the Dupont Co., of West Virginia, for $13,151, due for advances on promissory notes.

John M. Farnsche, recently convicted of arson in the first degree, appeared for sentence before Recorder Smythe to-day. After a long argument from the prisoner's counsel for a new trial he was granted until Tuesday next to submit papers.

Traffic manager's jury which has been investigating the death of Jockey Decker, who was found dead beside the railroad track at Morris park about two weeks ago, to-day returned a verdict that he came to his death by jumping off a Hartford and New Haven train and fracturing his skull.

A number of poles and much wire were taken down by the superintendent of public works today. House wires on Doane, Elm, West Broadway and Canal streets were also removed.

Government Attends Sunday School.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The news received at the war department of the result of the efforts being made by western army officers to carry out the provisions of the army appropriation bill authorizing the enlistment in the regular army of 2000 Indian recruits, is very discouraging. The officer's report that the Indians will not enlist in the infantry under any circumstances, as they abhor walking. They will not enlist in the cavalry except as scouts, because they do not care to bind themselves to five years' service nor to be subject to removal to distant parts of the country. Then too, they want their women with them, and the great majority of the bucks are unfit for military service, physically. It is doubtful if a single Indian company can be recruited in the west.

But the outlook in the south is more hopeful. At Mount Vernon barracks, Alabama, where the Apache Indians who led the Geronimo campaign are placed, it is said that all of the Indians, some thirty-five or forty, are about to enlist. These Indians are said to be progressing rapidly in the path of civilization and the almost incredible fact is reported that the renowned warrior, Geronimo, who was for years the terror of the west, is now a prominent teacher in the local Sunday school and attends services regularly every Sunday to keep order.

California's Population.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Superintendent Porter of the census bureau today issued a bulletin containing the special count by races made by the census for the state of California. This count was made in order to separate the Chinese and Indians from the rest of the population as required by the laws of that state for purposes of state apportionment. The results of this special count are shown by counties. For the state as a whole the white population has increased from 867,181 in 1880 to 1,111,356 in 1890, an increase of 344,175. The colored population of California shows an increase during the decade of 5,419, while there has been a decrease in the Chinese of 9,[illegible]. The whole number of Indians in the state was less in 1890 than in 1880 by 3,[illegible]. The number of Japanese in 1890 as compared with 1000 is large, although relatively small compared with the whole population. The number of Japanese returned in 1890 was 1,039 against 86 in 1880.

A Victim of Ingratitude.

WINNIPEG, Man., April 3.—Attorney General Martin has resigned. He gives several reasons, one being the people's ingratitude. The real reason is that he was discharged three weeks ago to make room for Clifford Sifton, who will be succeeded by Clifford Sifton.

Wouldn't Baron Fava consent to hang Detective O'Malley as a sufficient revenge for the killing of the criminals at New Orleans?

BLAINE'S DIPLOMACY.

In his treatment of the New Orleans affair Secretary Blaine has failed to take the position which his reputation for able and diplomatic would lead us to expect.

After stating the killing of four subjects of the King of Italy, the minister of foreign relations, which was to consist in the official assurance that the guilty part should be brought to justice, and the recognition of the principle that an injury should be due to the family of the victims.

It would seem that the reasonable view to take of a case of this kind would be that the government which had failed to afford protection to the Italians should be called to the protection of the Italian government. A request might have been made for the names of those who were supposed to be subject of the king of Italy, with the names in his possession as proof of the state department would have had no great difficulty in getting from the New Orleans police the record of the crime. One, it is said, was a well-known bandit, outlawed by the Italian government; one was a murderer who had fled to avoid trial for his life. One had abjured his fatherland by voting at an American election. One was living with an Italian woman. It does not appear that any one was entitled to the protection of the government which had driven them or which they had left behind. With facts like these in his possession, having in the meantime given assurance to the minister that the government would do all in its power to certain the facts and punish the guilty, and having shown a reasonable disposition to carry out the promise, Secretary Blaine might well have been content to rest the issue upon this point instead of carrying it further to less tenable ground. The matter of federal power might not have been discussed, the question of whether these men received the protection to which they had a right under the treaty need not have been brought up; nor need there have been anything said about their guilt or innocence, with which international law has nothing to do. These points might have been raised as a second line of defense, but the first was much stronger.

Secretary Blaine has seen fit to ignore this line of argument. He asserts a demand for justice upon the slayers of Italian subjects in violation of treaty rights by saying that the constitution of the United States, and of the state of Louisiana is such that neither the national government nor the government of the state can guarantee the result of a trial. This is either false or evasive. Minister Fava asked for justice to the guilty. If Secretary Blaine means that the state or national government cannot guarantee that the accused shall be found guilty, it is an evasion of the point at issue. If he means that our state and national constitutions do not guarantee protection to the innocent and punishment to the guilty, it is false.

Minister Fava accepts the latter alternative, and puts our government in an absurd and ridiculous position by inquiring why our government makes treaty obligations which it has no power to enforce. To unprejudiced minds the question is logical and unanswerable.

There is one other aspect of the case with which the Italian government has nothing to do. The ready endorsement of Secretary Blaine's answer by all the southern press is significant. Who would have supposed that a national secretary of state, a northerner and a Republican, would ever have referred a minister of a foreign power to the governor of a southern state for the settlement of an international dispute. Hear the cry of the Italian, "Is Louisiana known and recognized as a nation?" Does Secretary Blaine expect an accredited representative from the King of Italy to the Knights of Labor? If we fight, it is a civil war.

Blaine may have made a mistake.

RELIGIOUS WORLD.

Notes of Church Life by the Rev. J. [illegible] Gilmore.

It is not very strange that the Rev. Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, when rector of an Episcopal church in New York, was tried by Bishop Potter for preaching in a church of another denomination. This winter Dr. Rainsford of St. George's has invited Dr. Lyman Abbott to preach in his church, and now gives further expression to his desire for Christian unity by preaching in Plymouth church. He has also asked into his pulpit a number of other ministers who have never received orders from the Episcopal church. Moreover, there are a considerable and increasing number of Episcopal clergymen who approve of these fraternal exchanges and welcome the breaking down of the barriers which have separated them hitherto from brethren whose activities, consecration and divine call to the ministry they acknowledge and respect equally with those of ministers within their own denomination. These are signs that the essential unity of the church may be more rapidly becoming an evident reality than has been supposed possible.

The French government has established a Bureau of Labor of a novel composition which gives promise of valuable contributions to and one of the most pressing moral problems of the day. There is announced the creation of a permanent Bureau of Labor under the ministry of commerce, industry and colonization. The chamber voted 50,000 for the establishment of such a bureau. It is to be a sort of standing commission to investigate all matters pertaining to the interests of workingmen and to revise and recommend labor legislation. It is to be composed of fifty members, serving without pay, one-third to be members of parliament and experts in sociology, the other two-thirds to be divided equally between employers and laboring men.

The ecclesiastical court before which the Rev. Howard McQueary, Episcopal rector of Canton, Ohio, was tried for heresy, has brought in a verdict of guilty. Mr. McQueary denied the miraculous birth of Christ and the resurrection of the body of Christ, but affirmed his belief that the spirit of Christ issued from the body and that the apostles beheld this disembodied spirit. He affirms himself a believer in the divinity of Christ and a Trinitarian. Says the Christian Union concerning the trial:

"The judgment was not unanimous. The vote stood three for conviction of heresy to two for acquittal, and of the three who voted for conviction one favored only suspension, not dismissal from the ministry. If this judgment, therefore, indicates anything as to public sentiment in the church, it would be that two-thirds of the clergy do not regard the opinions of the Rev. Mr. McQueary inconsistent with holding the clerical office and fulfilling the functions of the priesthood in the Episcopal church. This, however, would be a large conclusion to draw from so small an indication; we can only say that really nothing is indicated as to ecclesiastical sentiment on this subject. As a means of settling a disputed point in doctrine, the trial has been, in fact, its only real effect has been to advertise widely Mr. McQueary's opinions."

The Paulist Fathers (Roman Catholic) in New York have adopted the novel practice of having some of the prayers in English. Apologies of this new departure. It may be noted that a Catholic paper, the Sacred Heart Review, makes a plausible plea for popular devotions in the vernacular, and says what must be very evident to a good many people who attend the Roman Catholic services: "It must be confessed that services conducted in an unknown tongue are not calculated to be edifying as they should be. Latin phrases are understood by the people, and especially when the people are called upon to participate." It confesses, too, that the full significance of the words may seem monotonous, and even dry and meaningless, to those who do not understand the service, and it believes that prayers in English would probably prove acceptable to the majority of the people they like best, provided that could be provided." This is a less acknowledgment that the aesthetic or merely emotional element in liturgical services is not sufficient, and the Catholics are asking for more intellectual elements, which will interpret the symbols they use. So long as the worshipper does not understand the meaning of the service it matters not whether it is chanted in Latin or Choctaw. A service in the vernacular would be a concession to the Roman Catholic laity. A service in Latin may be intelligent to the priest, but it cannot be very intelligent to the people. Would it not be well for Protestants also in liturgical services to leave out the Hebrew which are utterly devoid of meaning in modern life?

The schools maintained by the various American missionary societies in mission fields contain almost 175,000 pupils, and the 19,000 Protestant schools are training to Christian intelligence an aggregate of not much less than 600,000 children and youth.

Chaplin Marsh writes an interesting letter to the Christian Register concerning the observance of Easter in the Greek churches in Athens. We make the following extracts:

On Good Friday the Greeks call it Megalo Paraskeue. Athens is moral with the blast of bugles. It was the dominant note of the day, and there could hardly be a sweeter one. It surprised me at dawn upon my pillow, and lulled me to sleep again when the day was done.

For the Paschal Lamb keeps its place in the Passover of the Greek church. Forty thousand of them were slain this Easter in Athens and Piræus alone. From all Attica and the neighboring islands the shepherds drove them in, folding their flocks in the suburbs, and selling them in the market-places. In the little Agora where the streets of Zeus and Pluto meet, I watched the traffic. The purchaser felt the offered animal closely to see that it was "without spot or blemish" and (including, of course) fat enough to be good eating. The bargain struck, the buyer hoisted the lamb and carried it home. Everywhere throughout the city one saw this modern Androphoros (the man shouldering the Moschophoros bull) and it must be said that the consideration shown for the lambs seemed beyond little sense of the sacred symbolism.

After the Paschal lamb, one notes the myriads of bright-colored eggs, stacks of them everywhere, fairly painting the town red. As early as Thursday in every quarter of the city were to be seen in the open streets huge cauldrons, surrounded by great children with eyes to color. All the nests in Greece must have been robbed for Easter; for Athens and Piræus alone, I am told, used up four million eggs, or more than two dozen per capita of the population.

At dawn of Saturday they chant in all the churches, "This day the grave holds Him who holds creation in his hand;" but it is a day of transition from grief to gladness. In the Cathedral at night I witnessed the sequel to the burial pomp, the bringing back of our Lord from the tomb. At 11 the priest, standing at the threshold of the sanctuary, chants "Arise, O God, to judge the world," and sprinkles the congregation with flowers. Then is read the gospel of the resurrection, the appearance to the two Marys and Salome. But before midnight the clergy and congregation march out, and soon return in solemn procession, with the emblems of the resurrection, attended by the royal family, the ministers of the crown, and the municipal functionaries, while cannon thunder and trumpets blare and all the bells of Athens ring out the glad news.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

And on my way home at 1 o'clock I met the newsboys already crying the morning papers, every one of which has its leader, "Christos anesti," some of them with the words making a head-line the full width of the page.

And here I am tempted to translate for you an Easter editorial of one of our religious dailies, The Asty-noitis; it will convey more to a thoughtful mind than anything an outsider can say about the intellectual attitude of the modern Greek: "For eighteen centuries now the Christian world has continued with emotion every year the days of our Lord's Passion—days which loss never a jot of the grief and holy mystery which they enshrine. Ever new is the feeling begotten in the hearts of men by the Person of Him who gave Himself a sacrifice for the salvation of the world, and who, by his sacrifice alone, destroyed an old world and upon its ruins builded a new world, broader, higher, purer. Down to the epoch when the Nazarene witness of the truth hung upon the cross mankind was divided into two classes—master and slaves, and even the slaves were not only prostrate and sanctioned this unnatural and unjust distinction. It was the Galilean alone who radically overthrew it by his word: Neither Jew nor Greek, neither bond nor free! Shackles were broken, slaves became men, despots compelled to recognize the truth that in the sight of the Most High they were on a level with the meanest of their serfs.

"The great moral revolution that came upon humanity changed the face of the world. New nations took form, moulded under the influence of Christianity; and, educated in Christian ideas, they fashioned a new civilization which enlightened the world and chased away the darkness in which mankind was wandering.

"What does not the world owe to this witness of the Truth? To its true God also condescended to be lifted upon the cross that he might redeem it from wretchedness, darkness and sin? Let us all adore his Passion, and make ready to hail to-morrow his glorious resurrection, whereby he has authenticated and certified the immortality of the human soul."

Thus, I say, not a word for word an Athenian editorial, and not a sermon, though I have since listened to an English bishop preaching on the same theme without seeing that on the purely religious side the pulpit was at all in advance of the press.

Could I better show how, with the Greek Church, religion and politics go hand in hand?

A correspondent desires the insertion in the religious notes of the following item, venturing the second judgment that such consideration of a good minister's wife, I mean of a minister's good wife, should be remarked upon and encouraged. I may interpose that if the ladies read the gift to Mrs. Gifford's wedding-day they only followed a precedent already set in Colorado Springs:

The ladies of the Brookline Baptist church, thinking their pastor, Rev. O. P. Gifford, did not get as many weddings as in his Warren avenue pastorate, and unwilling that Mrs. Gifford's perquisites should thereby be curtailed, very quietly slipped into her hand recently twenty-five ten dollar gold pieces.

A pleasant indication of the cordial feeling existing between the working men of Colorado Springs and the churches appears in the fact that The labor unions of the city have requested the clergymen of the city on successive Sunday evenings for some months to come, to preach upon the labor question, taking such aspect of it as they shall severally please. The request has been heartily, and I believe unanimously, accorded to.

An Englishman Couldn't See It.

Little Marshall P. Wilder, the famous merry-maker, is perennial, and has a humorous skit for every hour of the day. This is one of his latest, illustrative of an Englishman's appreciation of humor:

I have been in England and I know stupified English humor. Its fun lamentable principles are not related to the American article that raises a cyclone of laughter. An Englishman was dining at a swell hotel out west, and after he finished his regular dinner he asked for sweets. A waiter from the Bowery had gone west for employment, and was waiting on the particular table at which the Englishman sat.

"And pha-at is sweets, sah?" asked the waiter.

The Englishman finally explained that he meant dessert, pudding, etc.

"We 'ave apple and mince pie," said the Bowery man.

"Give me mince pie."

"Wha-at d'er mean by mince pie?" asked the waiter in a hard, I-don't-care-a-continental tone of voice. Many heard the remark and laughed. An hour later I happened to meet the Englishman, and he asked me if I heard the waiter ask him what was the matter with the apple pie. I said 'Yes.' Then the Englishman naively asked me:

"Well, what was the matter with the apple pie?"—New York World.

That Lovely Narcissus.

Narcissus was a mythological young person who had so much beauty that it was in the way. He was interrupted during office hours by people who wanted to admire him, and a case went on record of a woman's thinking so much of him that she would always keep still until he got clear through talking. At last he got a good look at himself in a mirror, and he said he couldn't blame them. He felt that he was a menace to society, and history says that he drowned himself. But he didn't.

He went and got a pair of voluminous trousers, decorated his eye with a large piece of glass, took the fit out of the back of his coat, shoved his chin out of place with his collar, and went about his business satisfied that he had restored their peaces of mind to the feminine members of his acquaintance. But it was in vain. And he is obliged to devote large portions of his time—in fact, nearly all of it—to the search for improvements that will make his garments effective for their true purpose. In the meantime he is obliged to go on bothersomely beloved.—Washington Post.

Clothing of the Esquimaux.

Clothing for men consists of knee breeches, belted at the loins, a loose fitting cloak trimmed around the bottom, and the hood with wolf or wolverine, or a blending of both, a pair of stockings and a short legged pair of boots with sealskin soles. In winter two suits are worn, the inner suit with the hair next the body and the outer with the hair turned out.

The difference between the dress of men and women is that the latter have their boots, stockings and pantaloons all in one garment. The cloaks of all females have at the back of the neck a fullness for carrying infants.

These cloaks come down below the knees and are gored out at the sides up to the hips, making the front look like an apron.—Exchange.

Many Roman and Greek epicures were very fond of dog's flesh. Before Christianity was established among the Danes, on every ninth year ninety-nine dogs were sacrificed. In Sweden each ninth day ninety-nine dogs were destroyed. But later on dogs were not thought good enough, and every ninth year ninety-nine human beings were immolated, the sons of the reigning tyrant among the rest, in order that the life of the monarch might be prolonged.

It has been concluded that whatever preservative is to be applied, the timber for piles subjected to the action of seagerms should first be charred, so as to kill any germs near the surface, open the pores of the wood for the antiseptic, and destroy the nutritive matter upon which the worm lives while beginning its action.

A Scotch writer gives a list of instances which tend to prove that his country men are willing to suffer great extremity for learning. He mentions one young man who, though of fine manners and aristocratic appearance, dined but three times a week, and then upon a hot twopenny pie.

CHILDREN AS TEACHERS.

GREAT STUDENTS HAVE LEARNED VERY MUCH FROM THEM.

The Science of Modern Methods of Education Has Been Revolutionized by the Study of Child Nature—Parents Have a Great Deal to Learn.

From olden times it has been thought that adults should be the teachers and children simply learners, but in the Nineteenth century of civilization the greatest find that they can learn from the little ones. The best educators are those who have learned most from little children, and the most successful primary teachers are those who can see and feel things as children feel and see them. Authors of literature and textbooks for children must now know child nature or fail.

Scientific philologists are beginning to recognize the fact that children just learning to talk can in a few months teach them more about how languages are formed than can be learned by years of study of dead and living languages. Even the philosopher and psychologist are turning to the child for the solution of some of the problems that have so long baffled them, and the practical moralist turns from theories to learn of children how moral ideas are formed and moral action called forth.

GREAT STUDENTS.

The development of the race is epitomized in the language of the child, and the observer may read it in the unfolding physical activity of the innocent child, with more pleasure and profit than in the learned histories of civilization.

Tiedemann, Darwin, Taine, Alcott, Romanes and other learned men have studied their own children scientifically and taken notes on their development, while Perez, Hermann and others have made observations on a number of children. Hippolytus, Holden and Noble have collected and examined the vocabularies of several children two years old, in order to discover the general laws of speech.

Emily Talbot has collected observations of mothers on young babes. The most thorough and accurate study has, however, been made by Preyer, who carefully observed and experimented upon his boy during the first three years of his life, noting down each day everything calculated to throw light upon the capacity of children and the order of the development of their powers.

Much light has been thrown on many subjects by these investigations, but a sufficient number of carefully verified facts has been collected to enable us with certainty to distinguish characteristics common to all from individual peculiarities. It has been made evident that we can only [illegible] ourselves in observing and recording the facts, but many of them can be accurately observed and correctly interpreted only by one versed in physiology and psychology.

PLANS FOR A BOOK.

Considerable interest has been aroused and many plans proposed designing to increase scientific knowledge on the subject, to bring parents into new and pleasanter relations with each other, and to preserve records of interest and value to the family. Probably no more acceptable or more valuable present could be given to a child who had just attained his majority than a little book containing a record of his life from babyhood.

The data contained in such a record would make it possible for him to obey the maxim, "Know thyself," and to guide his life by that knowledge, while the little incidents of childish life that give so much pleasure when remembered and related by the parents would be preserved and enjoyed by himself and his descendants. Parents who have engaged in such observations have not only learned to understand their children better and been drawn into closer relations with them, but have also found the task most interesting and delightful.

It will probably be years before the observations of many scientists on children can be [illegible], but it is [illegible] time a father, mother or older sister of ordinary intelligence can, by exercising patience and care, observe and record certain facts of child development that will be as important and reliable as those furnished by the most learned scientist. These observations also are those made at the most interesting age of the child's life, the period of the development of speech.—E. A. Kirkpatrick in Lend a Hand.

He Stopped Smiling.

A young lady, wearing a stylish costume in a jaunty manner, stepped off a car at Madison avenue and Forty-third street Wednesday. She suddenly had occasion to get down on all fours in the mud, and, settling over on her side, sank broadside into the aristocratic Murray Hill slush. A woman standing at the edge of the curb near saw her prostrate sister and smiled. While she was smiling a gust of wind blew off her little cap and placed it in the center of a large, deep puddle. Words fail to give an idea of the misery of the jaunty maid. The moral is obvious.—New York Continent.

Suicides of Peers.

It may be interesting to mention that there are no fewer than twelve cases on record during the present century of suicide among members of the peerage. These are Lord French, Lord Londonderry, Lord Greaves, Lord James Beresford, Lord Munster, Lord Congleton, Lord Forth, Lord Cloncurry, Lord Willoughby, Lord Delaware, Lord Lyttleton and Lord Shaftesbury. Besides these Dr. Samuel Butcher, bishop of Meath, took his own life in 1853, and the Dowager Lady Howe met a similar tragic end in the following year.—London Truth.

Little settled in Baker county, Oregon, near what is now Baker City, a man who has since become identified with the resources and development of that country. This man is no other than Mr. John Stewart, one of the wealthiest and most influential citizens in the county. In a recent letter he says: "I had been suffering from pains in my back and kidney complaint for some time, and had used many remedies without any but temporary relief. The pains in my back had become so severe that I was prevented from attending to my business. I got not a day's rest or sleep on account of the severe pain. Hearing through a friend, of the wonderful cures effected by Oregon Kidney Tea, I procured a box, and from that very first dose I found instant relief, and before using half the contents of the box the pains in my back entirely disappeared. I have every faith in the virtues of the Oregon Kidney Tea, and can conscientiously recommend it to my friends. I would not be without it for anything."

Oregon Kidney Tea cures backache, frequence of urine, brick dust sediment, burning or painful sensation while urinating, and all affections of the kidney or urinary organs of either sex.

...ole on. He demurred for a few moments, but was finally overpowered and consented to serve. V. Z. Reed was made secretary.

S. W. Teagarden then announced that there was a committee of three present from the Democratic city convention, which had been appointed to confer with this convention to see if the two could not combine, and he moved that a committee of three be appointed to consult with the other committee. It was carried and Messrs Teagarden, T. R. Gould and V. Z. Reed were ...ted by the chair. After a few minutes' consultation they returned and presented the proposition that the two conventions unite on a ticket, the Independents to name the mayor and aldermen for the Second and Fifth wards, the Democrats to name the treasurer and aldermen for the other three wards. An ebony colored citizen named Tom Benton made an argument against this, saying that it was all right except for the Third ward. An aye and nay vote was taken, but the chairman was in doubt of the result, so he ordered the two sides to divide to opposite sides of the room. Mr. Duncan, chairman of the Democratic committee on combination, then rushed to the front and said that he could hear as well as anyone there. He knew that the motion was lost and he wasn't going to let his proposition remain before the meeting, but before he got out the meeting divided and the nays were left in a hopeless minority. Mr. Duncan then consented to accompany the Independent committee to the Democratic convention to lay the proposition before it.

A recess was taken for twenty minutes while the committee was gone. A delay of forty five minutes followed and then the delegation returned and S. W. Teagarden reported that the other convention had refused to consider the proposition and had nominated Dr. Strickler. A motion was made to tender the Democratic committee a vote of thanks and was declared carried amid a storm of noes.

The still, small voice of James Doyle was then heard calling for recognition. He brought another olive branch from the Democrats. If this convention would endorse Strickler, he said, they could name about all the rest of the ticket. A storm of cries of "put him out" arose. "Come back here and put me out" was the belligerent reply, but no bloodshed followed and the Democratic ambassador returned.

Mr. C. L. Gillingham was then nominated with three rousing cheers and a committee was sent out to find him and bring him in. The search occupied only a few moments and they led him to the front where he stood on the chair and spoke. He said that he thanked them for the honor they had done him and he had come over to say that he was with them; and if it was to be a three-cornered fight he was with them just the same. He did not think it was necessary to state his policy in city affairs. His record in the council was before them. He had been a friend of the laboring classes in the past, he was one of them, and he would be in the future. He had always tried to be honest and economical in the conduct of city affairs and would be so if elected. He had a great many things to say to them and he would prepare and publish a written statement in a day or so.

Nominations for candidate for city treasurer were next called for and E. E. Martin and W. H. Hoagland were named. On a vote Martin received a majority and the choice was made unanimous.

It was suggested that the meeting divide up into sub-meetings, one for each ward, to select candidates for aldermen, and this plan was followed.

In the Second ward the Republican candidates were endorsed. In the Third a contest between the Republican candidate and "Sig" Tarbot, colored, took place and the Republican candidate was endorsed. The fight in the Fourth was between Frank Finnegan and J. K. Fiesl, and the latter was chosen. The choosing of a candidate for the Fifth was left to the ward caucuses to be held to-night. The city central committee was elected as the ward caucus and was made up of two from each ward, except the members from the west side who will be named to-night. So far it is composed of S. W. Teagarden, Frank Sawyer, J. H. Reed, J. L. Nelson, A. B. Currie, W. J. Mathews, Charles Edwards and E. M. Stevenson. W. J. Mathews was made chairman.

All those present were urged to attend the "Citizens" convention to-night and prevent, if possible, the endorsement of the nomination of Strickler. The meeting then adjourned.

Address to Independent Voters.

The following address will be issued to-day by the committee appointed at the city hall convention last evening:

COLORADO SPRINGS, April 3, 1891.

To the Independent Voters, Colorado Springs.

A convention of the democratic voters of this city was held in city hall, Colorado Springs, last night, and Dr. Wm. Strickler was placed in nomination for the office of mayor. Dr. Strickler's views are those of many other citizens, that city officers should not be elected on a political basis and it is not probable that he will accept the nomination, coming as it did. The convention, believing that it has named the best candidate yet placed before the people, adjourned to meet this evening at city hall and appointed the undersigned a committee to invite the independent voters of the city to meet with them and consider a nomination for mayor.

The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock in city hall.

EGGS BY MACHINERY.

A PLAN TO MAKE THEM BETTER AND CHEAPER THAN HENS CAN.

What the Manufactured Article Contains. How the Ingredients Are Secured—The Making of the Shell Is Really a Delicate Piece of Work.

Patents have been granted to James Storey, of Kansas City, for the manufacture of eggs.

All the necessary machinery, which is not worth more than $600 at the outset, is in readiness to begin the experimental campaign with the American hen. If as much success attends these ventures as is anticipated by Mr. Storey, the contest between the machine and the hen for supremacy in the egg producing business will be short, and the victory to the credit of the former.

Mr. Storey's process is very simple, and yet he is prepared to manufacture an article so exactly like the genuine that it will be difficult to tell the difference either in appearance or taste from the prime product of a Plymouth Rock or Leghorn.

Lime, water, blood, milk, tallow, peas and one or two other vegetables are the ingredients of his compound. The shell and the yolk will not be difficult of manufacture. To take a good imitation of the "white" of the egg is the part that has required the most ingenuity to conquer, but Mr. Storey has succeeded in solving the problem successfully.

MAKING THE YOLK.

The yolk of an egg is composed of 30 per cent. of yellow fat, 11 per cent. of caseine, about 3 per cent. albumen and water. The fat is common animal fat, and beef fat, which is very cheap, will be the chief ingredient. To this a liberal amount of caseine, which is that portion of the milk which produces butter and cheese, will be added, and albumen mainly from beef blood, together with water, will be mixed in small quantities. The color, already a yellow, will be treated with a chemical which will serve a double purpose of deepening the color and preserving the mixture in a semi-liquid state until it is cooled.

The "white" of the egg is about one-eighth pure albumen, and is a difficult substance to produce chemically. A substance that appears to the eye exactly similar, and which hardens and whitens when cooked, has been produced by a mixture of legumin, or vegetable albumen, extracted from common peas, and which forms one-fourth of the peas, a little albumen from beef blood, a trifle of sulphur, considerable gelatine and a chemical solution to prevent rapid decomposition, and which also whitens the whole bulk when subjected to heat, just as the egg becomes white when boiled.

As beef blood will be utilized in very large quantities in the big egg mill, a few special cars will be fitted up with tanks to bring the blood from the Chicago slaughter houses.

MAKING THE SHELL.

The shell will be perfectly imitated by a simple solution of lime, water and glue. The machinery that is required is needed mainly in putting the egg together. Every yolk will be first run into a mold to be properly shaped, and then dropped into a second mold, where the right quantity of the white is placed previously. This latter substance, being a gelatine like matter, will incase the yolk very readily. By a unique machine the meat is there enveloped in the shell.

The shell is only partially hardened when the egg is put into it, and as there is a liberal amount of glue added to the lime, the edges of the shell soon adhere to each other very tightly, leaving no noticeable mark where they were joined. In order to make the imitation more completely successful, molds of several sizes will be introduced, making the eggs vary in bulk as do the products of any respectable flock of hens. The color of the shell will also be of two or three shades, rendering the likeness to the original still more striking.

Tests have been made which show that the artificial egg can be preserved for a month under proper conditions, and still taste as fresh as one laid by an ordinary hen. As all the ingredients of this reform egg are exceedingly cheap, it can be manufactured at the rate of about three cents a dozen. There will be no limit to the capacity of the novel mill, and families and boarding houses can be supplied in any quantities at prices so startlingly small as to warrant immediate popularity.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Strange Wants.

They must have a strange herd of sheep in New Zealand, where a settler announced that he wanted "an industrious man to take charge of 3,000 sheep who could talk Spanish." He must have been related to the young lady who announced "that she could do all kinds of sewing and embroidery except music." A western "ad." reads: "Wanted an energetic young man for a retail store partly out of doors, partly behind the counters." A contemporary asks what will be the result when the door is shut.—Providence Journal.

A Share in a Jewel.

There is a story told of a French savant who was shown a priceless jewel by a great duke.

"Thank you, my lord duke," said the man of science, "for allowing me to share with you the possession of so great a treasure."

"In what way?" said the duke.

"Why, your grace can do no more than look at it, and you have allowed me to do the same."—All the Year Round.

Spoke Too Quick.

Mr. Repplier (playing cribbage) What a very fine crib board, Miss Passeo!

Miss Passeo (playfully) A gift from my very first sweetheart, Mr. Repplier, when I was only 15.

Mr. Repplier (with polite interest) Indeed! That is quite the oldest crib board I ever saw—that is—er—I mean—.—West Shore.

Effects of African Arrow Poison.

It has been conjectured that the fatal effects of African arrow poison are not always due entirely to the poison itself, and with a view of determining how far fear and other influences enter into the results of its exhibition a series of experiments in inoculating the lower animals has been proposed. One of the poisons with which the arrows of the Africans are smeared is a dark substance like pitch. It is strong enough to kill elephants, and is considered so dangerous that its preparation is not allowed in the villages, but is carried on in the bush, where also the arrows are smeared. The virulence of the poison is remarkable; faintness, palpitation of the heart, nausea, pallor and the breaking out of beads of perspiration all over the body follow with extraordinary promptitude and death ensues.
